The Daily Courant. Numb. 4818

Saturday, March 30. 1717.

From the Amst. Courant, dated April 3.

Warsaw, March 17.

THE King will immediately after Easter depart from hence, and will take his Way by Water to Dantzick. The Russian Troops draw down towards the Ukraine, where a good Army of the Czar's Troops will rendezvous.

Berlin, March 23. The King of Prussia came this Evening from Brandenburg to Potsdam, and is expected here two Days hence. His Majesty has order'd all the Quarter-Masters of Horse to come hither, and the Quarter-Master-General Natzmer, to bring a neat State of the Regiments, with respect to the Men, Horses, further Mountings, and the Debts of each Regiment. His Majesty desiring to have the Debts of both Horse and Foot paid off. The King intends to go to Cleeve in the Beginning of May, to make a Review of his Troops that lie there. And about August his Majesty will go to Prussia, and tarry there two or three Months, upon certain Affairs whereof we shall be able to speak with some Certainty, when Count Flemming has been at Court.

From the Amst. Gazette, dated April 2.

Dresden, March 23. Count Flemming has pass'd by Francfort upon the Oder, going to execute some Commissions at the Court of Prussia. The Russian Troops commanded by General Bauer, who quitted the Mecklembergse, have taken their Quarters in Upper Poland. A Body of 5 or 6000 Men of the same Troops, are retired to the Side of Marienburg, Culm, and Debrezin in Prussia; and General Matuski who commands them is arriv'd at Thorn.

Leipsick, March 24. We hear from Poland, that the Turks continue to form a great Body of Troops near Choczim, to observe the Motions of the Russians, and undertake an Invasion into Transilvania. The Bassa of Bender has received Orders from the Grand Seignior, to cause two new Fortresses to be built on the Frontiers, over-against the River Pruth. The Porte has taken a Resolution to suppress the Government of Hospodars in Wallachia and Moldavia, and to settle two Bassa's there.

Hague, March 30. 'The Imperial Minister Baron 'Heems, delivered some Days ago, to the Deputies of 'their High Mightinesses Committees for Foreign Affairs, on the part of the Elector of Cologne, the following Memorial, in Answer to the last Proposals 'made by their High-Mightinesses, upon the Subject 'of Liege, Huy and Bon.

A Memorial concerning his most Serene Electoral Highness of Cologne.

1. 'THE Difference there is between his most serene ElectoralHighness of Cologne and their 'High Mightinesses the Lords the States General of 'the United Provinces, consists in what relates to the 'Town of Bon, and the Citadels of Liege and Huy.

2. 'Hitherto their High Mightinesses have always 'given to understand, that they have not any Distrust 'of his most Serene Electoral Highness; but they 'believe they ought to take, with respect to those 'three Places, certain Measures for their future Security, not being able to assure themselves of the Sentiments, that an Elector of Cologne or Prince of Liege, 'Successor of his said Electoral Highness, may have.

3. 'His Electoral Hsghness protests, that the three 'Places cannot for the present, be in better Hands 'than his, with respect to the Security that their 'High Mightinesses demand for themselves, and for 'which he interests himself as much as for his own.

4. 'In the mean time, their High Mightinesses demand that Security for the time to come as aboveisaid, 'and his Electoral Highness regarding also the future 'time, which their High Mightinesses do not seem 'to suppose concerns him personally, is heartily willing to concur on his Part, to that future Security 'for their High Mightinesses, provided that on their 'Side they now concur with the same Heartiness for 'his, and exact nothing from his Electoral Highness 'beyond what may establish that common Security.

5. 'And therefore his Electoral Highness, is willing 'to begin the Establishment of that Security of their 'High Mightinesses (which he shall always have as 'much at Heart as his own) by consenting that the 'Citadel of Huy shall be entirely demolished.

6. 'And for the same Security his Electoral High'ness will furthermore, demolish all the Out-works 'of his Residence of Bon, so that no more shall re'main than the simple Body of the Place, that is to 'say, the Courtines and the Bastions, which are alrea'dy without Parapets, and in so bad a Condition and 'so low, that they may be easily mounted with an or'dinary Ladder; His Electoral Highness having fur'ther,caused one entire Courtine,and two Demi-Basti'ons to be demolished, in such Manner that at present 'two Batallions may enter in Batalia, and the Place 'can no longer be look'd upon as a Place of War.

7. 'Besides this, his Electoral Highness will con'sent, that all the Fortifications which have been 'made to the Citadel of Liege since it was taken, shall 'be demolished, so that it shall remain simply as it 'was before the late War.

8. 'With respect to the Citadel of Huy, as much 'Security as can be, shall be given to their High 'Mightinesses.

9 'As for Bon in the Condition above describ'd, 'and as it will be when its Out-works are demolish'd, 'especially being shut up and separated as it is, by a 'Territory of above 60 Leagues, from the Empire, 'his Electoral Highness expects, that their High Mightinesses will look upon it as a Place wherein they will 'have their entire Security; and from that Place no'thing more can be retrench'd without going contrary 'to what is consistent with the Dignity of a great 'Prince, Elector of the Empire, who seeks the Friend'ship of their High Mightinesses with Earnestness 'and Sincerity, and will give them real Marks of it, 'upon all Occasions that may be for their Service.

10 'As to the Citadel of Liege, their High Mighti'nesses know better than any body, that it was no 'more than a paltry Place, built in the last Revolu'tions, when the late Elector of Cologne Maxamilian 'Henry, was oblig'd, contrary to his Goodness and 'Clemency, to let loose his Justice. But as it is on 'the Country Side, it has no more than just enough 'to secure it against a Scalade, which it would every 'Moment be expos'd to, in the Case of such Revolu'tions, if the least thing of its old Fortifications were 'retrench'd.

11. 'His Electoral Highness desires then to pro'cure to their High Mightinesses all imaginable Se'curity, provided on their Side they will have the 'same Regard for him, and what is due to his Dignity, 'without Prejudice to their said High Mightinesses.

12. 'He therefore offers to consent as is aboveisaid, 'to the intire Demolition of Huy, the Out-works of 'Bon, and the New Works of the Citadel of Liege; 'provided and upon Condition that that Citadel of 'Liege be immediately restored to him, in the Con'dition it was before the last War; and that in the 'Demolition of the Out-works of Bon, the Body of 'that Place, that is to say, the Courtines and Bastions 'remain intire.

13. ''Tis well enough known, that Bon and Liege 'held out but a very few Days after the Trenches 'were open'd against them; and that the latter of 'these Places was taken by Assault, notwithstanding 'all the Precautions that were made use of to preserve 'it. Bon has no more than a single Wall on the Side 'of the Rhine, and a Breach was made in it in twice 24 Hours. The same having happen'd also to the 'Citadel of Liege on the Country Side; His Electo'ral Highness looks upon those two Places, in the 'Condition which he demands them, in reality as Ob'jects unworthy the Attention of the most Power'ful Republick that has been since that of Rome.

14. 'With so many good Reasons, his Electoral 'Highness expects and hopes, that as he desires with 'so much Ardency, with the greatest Heartiness, and 'the utmost Sincerity, the Friendship of their High 'Mightinesses, Both Sides concurring in the same End, 'an Accommodation, that is so useful and so desireable, 'between so near Neighbours, and which is so ear'nestly desired by his Electoral Highness, may be 'brought to a Conclusion.

15. 'With respect to what happen'd at Bon upon 'the Subject of the Garrison which their High Mighti'nesses had there; His Electoral Highness could 'have heartily wished, that he had been able to have 'avoided coming to that Extremity; and he there'fore took all possible Measures to induce them peace'ably to withdraw those Troops; But as for what is 'past, He is ready to testifie to their High Mighti'nesses, by a Letter of Civility, in the most obliging 'Terms, his Displeasure and Concern that it ever hap'pened.

16. 'It ought to be added, that as for the Citadel of 'Liege, while their High Mightinesses possess Namur, 'and Maestricht, Huy being also razed, that Citadel 'in its old Condition, can serve only for a Security to 'his Electoral Highness, without being able to do any 'Prejudice to their High Mightinesses; especially not 'being possess'd by an Enemy, and shut up as it is by 'those two important Fortresses; and as we may say, 'even under the Cannon of Maestricht.

17. 'In fine, if an Accommodation be agreed up'on, which his Electoral Highness hopes and wishes, 'their High Mightinesses may assure themselves, that 'in Consideration and Acknowledgement of the Faci'lities they have brought to it, thro' a true and sincere Inclination to Friendship, his Electoral Highneſs will always be to their High Mightineſſes, the moſt perfect Friend, and the beſt Neighbour that ever was.

'cere
